Iraqi civilians inspect the area of destroyed houses and shops Thursday after the daylong clashes in Ramadi, 70 miles west of Bagh dad. U.S. Marines killed 25 insurgents and captured 25 others in fierce fighting on Wednesday in Ramadi, a hotbed of insurgents battling U.S. and Iraqi forces, the military said Thursday.

R.I. nightchub fire: More than 200 survivors of last year's Rhode Island nightchub fire and relatives of those killed sued the state, club owners and a former band tour manager Thursday, marking the largest wave of plaintiffs to file suit over the deadly blaze.

The lawsuit was filed in Providence Superior Court by a group of lawyers representing 226 people — the majority of those who survived the fire or had family members who perished.

Chicken abuse: Eleven workers from a poultry processing plant have been fired and fast-food giant KFC has halted purchases from the facility following the release of a secretly shot video showing employees kicking and stomping live chickens.

Pilgrim's Pride, among the largest poultry producers in the United States and Mexico, terminated three managers and eight hourly workers at its plant in Moorefield, W.Va. The company said it was continuing an investigation.

Louima lawyers: A federal magistrate in Brooklyn, N.Y., recommended that one of Abner Louima's original lawyers be denied any share in nearly $3 million in legal fees that resulted from Louima's police brutality

The lawyer, Brian Figeroux, has argued that he and the other members of Louima's first legal team should be entitled to a share in the legal fees because they initially helped bring the case into the public eye. Louima hired a new legal team which included Johnnie Cochran Jr., Barry Scheck, and Peter Neufeld, who have said they should get all of the money because the first set of lawyers mishandled the case.

Drowned children case: Andrea Yates, serving a life sentence for drowning her children in a bathtub, asked her husband why he didn't bring them to visit her in prison last weekend, her attorney said.

"She thought the kids were still alive," attorney George Parnham said Wednesday. Andrea Yates was transferred from the prison near Rusk, Texas, to a Galveston hospital Monday after refusing food and losing more than 20 pounds.

2000 Concorde crash: Air France Concorde flight 4590 takes off with fire trailing from its engine on the left wing from Charles de Gaulle airport in Paris on July 25, 2000. A French investigation shows the crash resulted in part from the hard debris that punctured the plane's tire, judicial officials said Wednesday.

A federal judge previously ruled that the state did not have jurisdiction in the case, but a three-judge panel of the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta reversed that decision.

Sentencing guidelines: Asserting that a Supreme Court decision last month had created "a wave of instability in the federal sentencing system," the Justice Department on Wednesday asked the court to review as soon as possible two federal cases that call into question sentencing guidelines.

Simultaneously, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco on Wednesday overturned the sentence of a Montana methamphetamine dealer, which had been enhanced by a federal trial judge. The 9th Circuit said it was acting in response to the Supreme Court rulling in Blakely v. Washington.

The high court held that Washington's system, which permits judges to make findings that increase a sentence beyond the specific counts the jury convicted on, violates the defendant's Sixth Amendment rights.

Madrid death toll: The official death toll in the Madrid, Spain, train bombings climbed to 191 after the Interior Ministry added an infant whose mother was injured in the attack while pregnant with the child. The infant died May 10, two days after he was born. His family said the child died because of injuries his pregnant mother suffered in the March 11 bombings. Also, the official tally of wounded passengers and bystanders is about 1,600, the official said Previous tallies exceeded 2,000

English girls' murder: The mother of a woman convicted of obstructing justice in a sensational child murder case was jailed for six months on Thursday for intimidating a witness at the trial.

Shirley Capp, 61, from Grimsby in eastern England, was found guilty last month of threatening her neighbor, Marion Westerman, who gave evidence in the trial of Ian Huntley.

He is now earning two life sentences after.

He is now serving two life sentences after being convicted of killing two 10-year-old girls at his home in the village of Soham in eastern England in August 2002. Capp's daughter Maxine Carr, 27, was released from prison in May after serving 21 months in prison for lying to protect Huntley, her former boyfriend.

War crimes suspect: Police said Thursday they have issued an arrest warrant for fugitive Serbia war crimes suspect Goran Hadzic and will launch an internal inquiry to probe whether someone in the force helped him escape capture last week. Hadzic fled his villa in Novi Sad, northern Serbia, last Friday, as an indictment by U.N. prosecutors was unveiled.

Chief U.N. war crimes prosecutor Carla Del Ponte accused Belgrade authorities of helping Hadzic escape by informing him of the indictment before it was released.

Ukraine mine explosion: Rescuers braved high levels of gas and scorching temperatures in an eastern Ukrainian coal mine Thursday as they resumed searching for five miners missing since a massive methane gas explosion killed 31.

Officials said it could take three days for crews to reach the site where the miners' bodies were expected to be, because the shaft and tunnels at the Krasnolimanskaya mine were still extremely hot.

Taiwan president shooting: Police showed blurry videotape footage of a mid-dle-aged man who was the latest suspect Thursday in the mysterious March 19 shooting that lightly injured the Taiwanese president and his runningmate one day before they were narrowly re-elected.

The man was standing on the side of the street in the "hot zone" or the spot where police believe President Chen Shui-bian was shot, investigator Wang Wen-chung said at a news conference.

I just want to let you guys know, how much we admire what you are doing in freeing the Iraqi people from a reign of tyranny. We admire your command for acting with dignity and respect for what is right and for acting with restraint in the rules of engagement. There is a lot of quiet support the world over but as always it is the objectors you hear most. This is not a time to sit on the sidelines. It is a time of action and we who chose not to forget what America has done to secure world peace over the past 65 years. We think about the pain and suffering you and your fellow soldiers and families have to endure and pray that our God will be with you and keep you safe wherever you are. ## U.S. Marines kill 25 insurgents in Ramadi

BY PAUL GARWOOD

The Associated Press

BAGHDAD - U.S. Marines killed 25 insurgents and captured 25 others during fierce fighting in Ramadi. the American military said Thursday. A decapitated body, meanwhile, was found on the banks of the Tigris River in northern Irag.

The gruesome discovery was made Wednesday, the same day militants announced they had abducted three Kenvans, three Indians and an Egyptian.

The decapitated body, found Wednesday night on the banks of the Tigris in the town of Beiji, was clad in an orange prison-style jumpsuit that kidnappers have forced some of their captives to wear before beheading them. Beside the body, which was still unidentified, was a head in a sack, Beiji police official Taha Abdullah told The Associated Press.

Bulgarian officials were investigating whether the remains were those of a man from that country identified as Ivaylo Kepov, 32, one of two Bulgarians who were kidnapped June 29 near the northern city of Mosul.

Indian officials in Baghdad worked with Egypt and Kenya to free the captives, an Indian offi-cial said from New Delhi on condition of anonymity.

The daylong clashes in Ramadi began after insurgents detonated a roadside bomb near a Marine convoy Wednesday afternoon, and as many as 10 Iraqi fighters then attacked with small arms and rocket-propelled grenades.

Tens of thousands fleeing Samarra

Many fear battle about to begin between U.S. military, heavily armed militants

By Doug Struck The Washington Post

BAGHDAD - Tens of thousands of people have fled Samarra, about 60 miles north of Baghdad, in recent weeks, expecting a showdown between U.S. troops and heavily armed groups within the city, according to U.S. and Iraqi sources

Residents of the city said guerrillas told people to leave neighborhoods in anticipation of a larger battle after a clash on Tuesday in which U.S. warplanes bombed two houses, killing at least four people, according to military authorities.

"I will not go back to Samarra," said Mohammed Mohammed 37 brought his extended family of more than 70 brothers, cousins and children to Baghdad this week because of the dangers. "We expect the resistance will be very strong when the Americans go in. And the Americans have no mercy.

Samarra is now controlled by a vola tile mix of tribes and gangs, some split along religious lines, and supporters of ousted president Saddam Hussein, according to interviews with numerous Samarra residents who have fled to Baghdad. On July 8, some of those groups launched an attack in which a car bomb-ing was followed by a fierce volley of mortars, killing five U.S. soldiers and an Iraqi National Guardsman, and injuring

Even before that, U.S. military authorities had been planning how to retake control of the city without a bloodbath. Officers said they are determined not to let Samarra follow what they call the Fallujah model. U.S. forces made an agreement to stay outside Falluiah, a city west of Baghdad, in order to end fierce clashes there during April. The city is now under the control of inrgents. "We're not going to make that pact," said Army Maj. Gen. John Batiste, com-mander of the First Infantry Division, which operates in the area. "Right now, it is a town where nobody is in charge That, we will fix. At the end of the day, there will be a city under competent civil government." U.S. military planners complained in private that Fallujah was a bad deal, allowing the city to become a rallying point and stronghold for guerrilla forces.

The U.S. military will try to mount a joint operation with Iraqi security forces, officials said. Under the plan, U.S. forces would likely seize Samarra in a powerful assault, and then have Iraqi National Guard or police patrol the city.

"It's not a situation that will necessarily evolve into what we saw in Falluiah in April." said Brig. Gen. Ery Lessel, the Army's deputy operations chief in Iraq. "We learned then how important it is to make sure we have capable Iraqi security forces in place to maintain security when the multinational forces withdraw from an area."

But formation of a competent and well-trained Iragi force has taken more time than officials had hoped. Officials said it has been particularly difficult to mount a contingent willing to take on the challenges in Samarra. The mortar attack on July 8 was aimed at a compound used by U.S. and Iraqi National Guard troops. Since then, many of the guardsmen have quit, rather than participate in the fighting in Samarra, according to Mo-

"There's no National Guard. And the police in town do their patrols, but they take their orders from the mujaheddin said Mohammed, who said he had been in Samarra on Tuesday.

"Right now, the mujaheddin and insurgents control everything," said Hassan, another Samarra resident who left the city with his family to move in with relatives in Baghdad. He refused to give his last name, fearing retribution.

Most of Samarra's 300,000 residents are Sunni Muslim, but the city also is home to two important Shiite shrines, and has a small minority of Kurds. Residents said relations with U.S. forces began to deteriorate after American troops fired on a wedding party last winter that was celebrating in a traditional way by shooting weapons into the air. The wedding party, members one of the larger extended clans in the city, vowed revenge. They have been joined by religious militants intent on waging a holy war, by former members of Iraq's disbanded Republican Guard who still sometimes wear their uniforms in the city, and an assortment of other tribes and groups willing to join the fight for sentiment or for money. Some of the fighters came from Fallujah, Mohammed and other residents said, and some came from outside the country

The groups are threatening and killing anyone who they believe cooperates with U.S. authorities or even with the Iraqi government, the residents said. For several weeks, Samarra residents have been slipping out of town. Many have houses or extended families in Baghdad, and have moved in. Some travel back and forth, depending on their reading of the dangers on a particular

Report: Terror fight needs another $12B

BY ALAN FRAM The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The Penta gon will need an additional $12.3 billion through September to pay for wars in Iraq and Afghanistan and its worldwide effort against terrorism, congressional auditors

That is triple what Gen. Richard Myers, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, projected in April he would need to make it through September at the time that his projection seemed too low, so the congressional projection issued Wednesday was no surprise.

Democrats quickly used it to criticize President Bush for un-derestimating the burden the wars — especially in Iraq — have thrust on taxpayers.

"He has grossly mismanaged the war on terrorism and the war in Iraq," said Mark Kitchens, deputy press secretary to Democratpresidential candidate Sen.

Kitchens called the study "another example of how George W. Bush planned for best case scenarios and failed to prepare for the realities of war.

Rep. John Spratt, D-S.C., who requested the study, said it underlined "another in a long line of miscalculations" by Bush on Iraq.

At the White House, budget office spokesman Chad Kolton defended the president.

"When it comes to making decisions about resources for our men thing that matters is ensuring they have what they need to get the job done," Kolton said.

The report was written by the Government Accountability Office, Congress' investigative arm formerly called the General Accounting Office.

Its release came a day before Congress was expected to approve a $417.5 billion defense bill for next year that includes $25 billion for military operations in Iraq and Afghanistan, That $25

Bush signs the measure, but it is unclear that the administration will use any of that money until the fall

After Congress provided $87 billion last November for Iraq and Afghanistan, the House began this year insisting it would need no extra money until next year. Under congressional pressure, it requested $25 billion in May for use beginning next October, when the government's new budget year begins.

IG finds 94 cases of prisoner abuse

WASHINGTON - The U.S. military has found 94 cases of confirmed or alleged abuse of prisoners by U.S. soldiers in Iraq and Afghanistan since the fall of 2001, the Army's inspector general said Thursday in a long-awaited re-

The number is significantly higher than all other previous estimates given by the Pentagon, which had refused until now to give a total number of abuse allegations

The inspector general investigation, ordered Feb. 10 after the allegations of abuse at the Abu Ghraib prison in Iraq came to the attention of top Army officials in Washington, concluded that there were no systemic problems that contributed to the abuse. In some cases, the report found, the abuse was abetted or facilitated by officers not following proper proce-

Most of the alleged abuses 45 of the 94 - happened at the point where the detainee was canhek, the Army's inspector gener-al. Of those 45 cases, 20 involved allegations of physical abuse and the rest were allegations of theft or other crimes, he said

Twenty-one cases of alleged abuse happened at detention centers such as Abu Ghraib, Mikolashek said. Another 19 happened at collection points where prisoners are gathered between their captheir transfer long-term prisons

Only eight cases happened during or surrounding interroga-tions, Mikolashek said.

In contrast to its own findings that there were no systemic problems, however, the Army report also cites a February report from the International Committee for the Red Cross that alleged that "methods of ill treatment" were "used in a systematic way" by the U.S. military in Iraq.

Seven members of the 372nd Military Police Company, an Army Reserve unit from Cresaptown, Md., were charged in the prisoner abuse scandal, which unfolded this past spring with the release of pictures of abuse and sexual humiliation of prisoners at Iraq's Abu Ghraib prison.

Questions also arose about prisons in Afghanistan and Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and the deaths of detainees, as well as whether abuse was part of interrogations. The Army has not yet made the

U.S. received man from private prison

BY STEPHEN GRAHAM

KABUL, Afghanistan -The U.S. military acknowledged Thursday it held an Afghan man for a month after taking custody of him from three American counterterror vigilantes who have since been arrested on charges of torturing prisoners at a private jail they ran in the Afghan capital.

The American military has tried to distance itself from the group, led by a former American servicemember named Jonathan Idema, insisting they were freelancers working outside the law. But spokesman Maj. Jon Siepmann acknowledged that the military had received a detainee from Idema's group at Bagram Air Base, north of Kabul, on May 3.

epmann said Idema had appeared "questionable" the moment he presented the detainee, and that suspicion grew when, one month later, the man turned out not to be the top suspect that Idema had described.

"That doesn't mean at the time that we knew Mr Idema's full track record or other things he was doing out there," Siepmann said. "This was a person who turned in a person who we believed was on our list of terrorists and we accented him Siepmann declined to identify the detainee or if he asked for anything in return for the detainee. The U.S. government has offered rewards for the capture of a string of top fugitives, including a $50 million bounty on al-Qaida leader Osama bin Laden Siepmann said officials were looking into wheth-er Idema had other contact with U.S.-led forces here, but insisted he was in Afghanistan "entirely of his own volition.

American Jonathan Keith Idema, 48, charged with running his own private prison and torture chamber in Kabul, stands trial in the Afghan capital on Wednesday. Idema and two others, Edward Caraballo and Brett Bennett, were arrested July 5.

Officials in Washington have also denied the three were employed or sponsored by any arm of U.S. government.

Idema said he was in daily telephone and e-mail contact with officials "at the highest level," includefense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld's office.

"The American authorities absolutely condoned what we did. They absolutely supported what we did," he said, "We have extensive evidence of that." A Pentagon official, speaking on condition of ano-

1st AD families taking part in pilot counseling program

BY SANDRA JONTZ

Soldiers and families of the Army's 1st Armored Division are participating in a study that could be used to improve how the military services support family needs of deployed troops.

Researchers at the Military Family Research Interior at Purdue University in Indiana have started a counseling pilot program "with the idea being to be able to create an infusion of resources for a unit that was very challenged," said Shelley Mac-Dermid, co-director of the MFRI, and a professor of child development and family issues at Purdue.

"We want to reach out to families wherever they are and help them deal with the things they're dealing with right at that moment," she said.

The Pentagon selected the 1st AD for the study because of hardships troops and families went through when nearly 18,000 1st AD soldiers got word in April their deployments to Iraq were being extended beyond their once-promise 12 months brooks on ground. Orders were to be extended by a large of the property of the pro

The news added disappointment to already-existing stress for both soldiers living and working in a combat zone, and families back home anxiously awaiting their return, MacDermid said.

This summer, the first group of 22 counselors visited six installations in Germany.

"From the get-go, the job was to be out and about talking with families, looking for the need and working to fill it," MacDermid said.

Since the study still is in its infancy, it is too early to determine what families' and soldiers' top needs are, but early results indicate most just needed someone to whom they could vent, she said.

"And families really just wanted someone to tell them that it was OK to feel what they were feeling, and to acknowledge the challenges they were facing," MacDermid explained. A second group of counselors is slated to return this fall. Eventually, MacDermid expects the research will lead to better ways to prepare troops and their families for tough deployments before loved ones ship off to war zones or for long periods away from family. she said.

"Resources need to be infused at installations that have a high need," such as those with deploying troops, she said. "This is something the operations side might do, and it makes sense to do it on the family-support side, too."

The study with the 1st AD is not the only one underway at the MFRI, a research program at Purdue University funded by the Pentagon's Office offiliary Community and Family Policy. The institute's mission is to conduct interdisciplinary, multi-level research that provides insight into the impact of quality of life factors on military members and their families.

"We're jointly studying ways to assist children transitioning between schools, looking how to make child care more affordable, determining what elements would make up a world-class reunion program for servicemembers returning from deployment," said Charles Abell, principal deputy undersecretary for Personnel and Readiness, rattling off projects for members of the Senate Committee on Health, Education, Labor and Perssion, which held a hearing Wednesday on mili-

"We're working with an Indiana National Guard unit studying the affects of mobilization and deployment on families, and we have a special project with Purdue University to assist the families of the 1st Armored Division, which was extended in Iraq beyond its 12 months," he added.

Eventually, researchers plan to reach out to other military services, MacDermid said.

"We're now using the work with the Army, getting the pilot data, and plan to present a larger proposal ... to be presented this fall seek in partnership with the DOD, and hope to be in the field in early '05" to study other service's units, he said.

In the hot seat

Troops learn to keep their cool in Iraq's heat

BY RICK EMERT Stars and Strings

FOB IRONHORSE, Iraq — For soldiers in Iraq, where summertime temperatures are 110 in the shade — if you can find any — the biggest enemy may be the heat. And while the weapon of choice to fight that enemy is air conditioning, leaders are making sure their troops are taking extra steps to avoid overheating.

At Forward Operating Base
Ironhorse, soldiers from the 1st
Cavalry Division's 1st Brigade Combat Team spend as little time as possible in the unrelenting sum, which can push the thermometer to 130 degrees in August.

Those manning guard towers and base gates work outside for four hours, then get eight hours in an area where they can cool down, said last Lt. Sharron Turnage, the brigade's medical operations officer. Many of the outside areas also have canopies or modified carnorts to provide shade.

Other soldiers who must work outdoors complete their jobs in the evening, when temperatures are more bearable (in the 90s), she said

Leaders constantly warn their soldiers to stay hydrated and watch for symptoms of dehydration, heat cramps, heat exhaustion or heat stroke, Turnage said. The measures seem to be working.

Since the 1st Cav's deployment started in January, only eight people from 1st Brigade Combat Team — which includes soldiers, Iraqi National Guard members and KBR workers — have been treated for heat injuries, Turnage said. All were minor cases of dehydration with only one requiring intravenous fluids.

At FOB Ironhorse, soldiers live in buildings that were formerly of fices and apartments. The rooms vary in size from one-man rooms to open bays that sleep six to eight people. All have air conditioning, said Capt. Ted Kaiser, base mayor.

The base also has a pool for

The base also has a pool for physical training that the soldiers use in the early morning, evenings or occasionally during the day to cool down, Kaiser said.

Soldiers who conduct patrols outside the gate in full battle gear, including body armor, don't have many options when it comes to keeping cool. Some of the up-armored Humvees have air conditioning, while other Humvees that have modified armor have mounted air conditioners to keep passengers cool, Kaiser said. Armored personnel carriers and tanks do not.

"I make sure I have plenty of water with me, and I bring a cooler with ice," said Sgt. John Cox, a gunner.

KBR also provides bags of ice to the soldiers. "If I get too hot, I just dump water on myself," Cox said.

That seems to be a common

"iff I have to spend a lot of time outside, I pour water on my head to keep cool," said Sgt. Lori Luster, a supply sergeant from the brigade. Luster also uses a neck cooler, an item that works much like an ice pack and stays cold for a couple of hours.

Luster said she also drinks Gatorade and about three 1.5-liter bottles of water a day.

While the soldiers appear to be beating the heat, the base's generators aren't faring as well. Three of the 16 generators that provide all of the base's power supply were down on Thursday, according to Kaiser.

The generators are paired up and run in 12-hour shifts so that they won't overheat. Some of the generators are cooled by running water over their radiators, but the water flow to the base and surrounding neighborhoods had been cut, Kaiser said.

"When the water is running, these generators are at 100 percent power," he said. When the generators aren't cooled properly, output can drop to 60 percent.

Additionally, only night shift workers are allowed to run air conditioning in their rooms during the day to limit power usage, Kaiser said.

Other generators and large air-conditioning units that are keeping the base's communications network up will have a new protection from the heat in a matter of days. Contractors are building shelters that consist of two layers of metal sandwiching a layer of insulated Styrofoam to keep the heat off the units. Kaiser said.

"Heat is our biggest enemy out here," Kaiser said. "Keeping up with it is a daily fight."

Büdingen squadron welcomes new leader

BY KEVIN DOUGHERTY Stars and Stripes

BÜDINGEN, Germany - With many still in desert fatigues, the troops of the 1st Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment bid their commander adieu Thursday. Delayed by a month because of the need to keep the 1st Armored Division a bit longer in Iraq, the change of command ceremony looked traditional. There were speeches, dignitaries, a marching band, soldiers standing in formation and the ceremonial passing of the unit guidon.

Five days after returning home from the Middle East, Lt. Col. Charles Williams relinquished command of the squadron to Lt. Col. John Peeler. Peeler called the chance to lead the cavalry squadron "a once-in-a-lifetime op-portunity," and said he would do his best to preserve its honor

The ceremony was also festive though in a respectful way. After all, it's still the Army.

But the troops and Williams were in a great mood. Most of the cavalry troops who served in Iraq arrived back at Armstrong Barracks in just the last few days. Williams, for example, returned Sat-

Eighteen months ago, Williams and scores of other troops volunteered in the middle of the night to help local crews fill sandbags to save the old city center and its historic walls and gate.

"It's not only a partnership, but a friendship," said Erich Spamer, the mayor of Büdingen.

Silver Flag exercise hones airmen's skills for all phases of deployment

BY MARNI MCENTEE

Stars and Strine.

RAMSTEIN AIR BASE, Germany - Airmen from all U.S. Air Forces in Europe bases are getting a refresher course in being expeditionary this week at the Silver Flag exercise on Ramstein.

About 200 airmen, including some from several Air National Guard and Reserve units from the United States, are participating in the 10-day exercise to prepare for all phases of deployment, said Senior Master Sgt. Les Jones of Ramstein's 435th Construction and Training Squadron.

The exercise started in 1979 at Ramstein to train civil engineers. but it has evolved to include dozens of Air Force specialties, including services, medical units, security forces and communications airmen. Silver Flag is held six to eight times a year, usually for airmen set to deploy in the coming months, Jones said.

For the second time, this exercise includes a segment called the Expeditionary Leadership Program. The program trains airmen in the ranks of technical sergeant to major in the leadership skills they need to handle deployed troops, said Col. Charles Weiss, commander of the 38th Combat Support Center.

"The training helps them han-dle what they could face before they deploy, while they are de-ployed and after they come home," Weiss said. Troops' medical problems, marriage issues equipment transport and building a tent city downrange are a few of the subjects covered, he said

On Wednesday, airmen were building a tent city near Ram-stein's flight line, where they will live until Saturday. They'll set up communications, a dining facility and emergency response teams, among other things.

"Everybody's got a piece of the puzzle," said Master Sgt. Tim Penwell of the 264th Combat Communications Squadron, an Air National Guard unit based in Chicago.

Triathlons offer different trials for 3 Army lawyers BY JESSICA INIGO

Stare and Strings

HEIDELBERG Germany - A trio of military lawyers have just closed one of their toughest trials.

Capts. Gray B. Broughton, Ben Grimes and Travis W. Hall, all V Corps judge advocates, con-quered the Opel Ironman Germany triathlon competition July 11. Now they're prepping for the Heidelbergman triathlon Aug. 1.

On its own, the Heidelbergman, with its 1.05-mile swim, 22.32-mile bike ride and 6.25mile run, is a formidable feat. But compared to the German Ironman competition — swim-ming 2.4 miles in a lake, pedaling 112 miles on bicycles throughout Frankfurt and its surrounding communities, and then running 26.2 miles up and down the bank of the Main River — the Heidelbergman is like a break to the lawyers' busy schedules.

Broughton finished the Ironman in the fastest time at 12 hours and 30 minutes. Grimes finished at 13:12 and Hall at 14:32.

The overall winner of Ironman Germany was Stefan Holzner who reached the finish line at the historic Frankfurt Römerberg square in 8 hours, 16 minutes, and 35 seconds, winning the quali fying event for the Ironman Triathlon World Championships in Hawaii.

When the lawvers realized they were all planning to participate in the Ironman Germany competition, they sought to train together. The command allowed the three to begin an alternate physical training program open to their company each morning. Usually, the alternate PT program consisted of various running activities.

In the afternoons, the triathletes continued training by swimming or riding their bikes.

Training to this trio, was about stressing their body to make it stronger and more efficient. Not only were they in a perpetual state of fatigue, they said, they were emotionally and mentally engaged with their racing goals most of the time.

Add a wife or girlfriend, kids, a full-time military career and deployments, as well as outside commitments, and life for the three was pretty busy.

The juggling act was difficult for all the lawyers, especially Broughton and Hall, who have families to think of. But no one felt the pressure more than Grimes. He is the master juggler.

"Yeah, it's tough when you have a girlfriend who lives in the States, plus a lot of extra curricu-lar activities," Grimes, of York, Pa., said. "I was in a couple of theater shows, which is a big commitment outside of work, plus I have my regular work to keep up Sometimes it's a battle between commitments and sleep. Sleep lost out on a lot of days."

While training for the German

Ironman, Grimes also starred in the Roadside Theater shows "Proof" and "Victor/Victoria."

Grimes, 30, has completed two full Ironman triathlons; four half Ironman events where partici-pants finish one-half of each event: many shorter distance triathlons; and three to four races a year over the past several years.

"My girlfriend only lets me do an Ironman every other year," ex-plained Grimes, which is why he's taking next year off to get to know his girlfriend again before training for an Ironman in 2006 and the 2008 New Zealand Ironman competition.

For Hall, between work, family life and the Ironman, there really isn't time for much else. He said he tried to keep his training from affecting his family life too much by taking time to see special events in his three children's lives. For instance, he would always make time to attend his

Hall, who was always involved in team sports, said he began doing triathlons because "it's safer than doing Everest."

After the Heidelbergman, Hall said he hopes to compete in the Ironman Triathlon World Chamnionshins in Hawaii when he's 40 "It just sounds like a great over-the-hill thing to do," said

Hall, who's now 3 Broughton will hang up his Ironman gear for at least a year after the Heidelbergman. His wife. Tamara, is due to have their first child in January.

"We're expecting a baby and my job is really busy, so I wouldn't be able to put in the time to workout. I would cheat myself," Broughton said.

Broughton has always incorporated sports into his life, but now he's planning to take a year off of major competition to enjoy his new baby.

Broughton, 28, said he was pleased with his time at the Ironman Germany, which was his first Ironman triathlon. He has done shorter triathlons, as well as races throughout the years.

A friend, Cabell Hatchett, who introduced him to triathlons, came from their hometown of Richmond, Va., to compete in the ronman with him.

Broughton said he plans to make a comeback to Ironman competition in 2006.

Bicycling event contact

HANAU, Germany — The 104th Area Support Group isn't backpedaling on its support of a September cycling event, it's just that the ASG wants to give credit where credit is due.

And so the pat on the back — as well as the phone calls and e-mails — should go to either Larry Bostick, who came up with the idea, or the 414th Base Support Battalion, which is supporting his efforts. It's best to reach Bostick by e-mail at: larry. bostick@104asg.army.mil.

The Pioneer Criterium is scheduled for Sept. 18 on Pioneer Casem in Hanau. A "criterium" is a bicycling event in which participants gather en masse at a starting line and then race around a closed-circuit course, often a half-mile to a mile in length.

Five races are planned, with riders divided by age and gender. One race is 40 miles, the others 30 miles.

Also backing the event is the U.S. Armed Forces Europe Cycling Team, which in the future might make the race part of its cycling series.

Change of command

Col. Walter Sawyer assumed command of the 29th Support Group, a subordinate unit of the 21st Theater Support Command, headquartered in Kaiserslautern, Germany.

Sawyer replaced Col. Lynn Collyar during the ceremony last Friday.

Sawyer's previous assignment was as a Joint Logistics Officer on the Joint Staff in the Logistics Directorate (J4) at the Pentagon in Arlington, Va.

Collyar moves to the Department of the Army, Headquarters G8, Force Development Logistics, in Washington, D.C.

The 29th provides direct general support maintenance, direct supply support, intermediate aviation maintenance support and multifunctional support in explosive ordnance.

Air Force moves to counter rise in airmen's suicides

Two-fold initiative to include renewed look at prevention, search for reasons

BY LISA BURGESS Stars and Stripes

ARLINGTON, Va. — Alarmed by a sudden uptick in suicides, Air Force officials are engaging in a two-fold campaign to determine the reasons behind the increase and re-invigorate the service's suicide prevention pro-

Just halfway through the calendar year, there already have been 27 suicides in the active Air Force, or 13 per 100,000.

While that rate is in line with the other services, it is a big change for the Air Force, which ever since inaugurating a model suicide awareness initiative in 1997 has enjoyed rates that are typically 25 percent lower than any of its sister services, according to Lt. Col. Rick Campise, the Air Force Suicide Prevention Program director.

According to service statistics, the Navy and Army suicide rate in recent years has been about 11 per 100,000 servicemembers, while the Marine Corps is a bit higher, around 13 per 100,000.

Those three services are in line with suicide rates in the civilian world, which also occur at a rate of 11 to 12 per 100,000, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. In the seven years since the Air Force has had a major prevention program in place, the service's suicide rate has averaged about 9.3 per 100,000, Campise told Stars and Stripes in a Tuesday telephone interview.

But beginning last fall, after three "normal" quarters averaging two or three suicides per month, something began to change for the Air Force.

In October, five airmen killed themselves. In November, the number of suicides rose to six. Air Force officials immediately went on the alert.

"We said, is this the start of a trend?" Campise said. "It was difficult to tell," because overall numbers of suicides are so low when compared to a total population, such as the active Air Force's 373,000 airmen.

"One or two [additional deaths] can make a big difference" statistically, Campise said. "That's why the epidemiological folk talk about trends in five-year cycles."

Nevertheless, "in the Air Force, we can't afford to wait for five years before we decide we have a problem, and that we need to do something about it." Campise said. "It's really frustrating for the Air Force, because we know we can make a difference" in reducing such deaths, Campise said.

The Air Force's new anti-suicide efforts includes two phases. First, officials are working to re-invigorate their Suicide Prevention Program.

"It's hard to maintain a successful program, because people habituate — they get used to it and stop paying attention," Campise said. "So we are blanketing" Air Force leaders, airmen, and family groups with anti-suicide efforts.

Since November, eight service-wide messages and several suicide prevention memos have gone out from Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. John Jumper and other senior leaders. Campise said.

Officials have also widely distributed two CD-ROM programs, "Leader's Guide for Managing Personnel in Distress," and a "Community, Leadership, and Violence Awareness Brief," to all major Air Force Commands and bases, he said.

A second, and more "daunting" task is to try and determine why more airmen are taking their own lives this year, Campise said.

The strains prompted by the

The strains prompted by the war on terrorism are a possible culprit, but none of the Air Force's suicides this year or last have involved airmen deployed to Iraq or Afghanistan, or even airmen who recently returned, Campise said.

Still, "overall, demands on the military have increased, and not just for the deployed people," Campise said.

The additional work and faster pace "lends an ingredient of stress that is certainly not a [suicide] trigger, but may be a piece" of the puzzle, he said. In August, the Air Force will,

In August, the Air Force will, for the first time, grant civilian suicide researchers from Rochester, Baylor University, and Catholic University access to the personnel files of all airmen who have taken their lives in the past several years, Campise said. The detailed information in the

The detailed information in the files — "more data than anyone has ever had access to for this kind of project," Campise said — should help officials understand who is most vulnerable to suicide, and why some airmen take that ultimate, and ultimately tragic, step.

Army recruit pool at lowest level in 3 years

BY THOMAS E. RICKS AND JOSH WHITE The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The Army's pool of future recruits has dwindled to its lowest level in three years, worrying Pentagon of-ficials as the service is stretched by the unexpectedly difficult occupation of Irac The Army watches the number of future soldiers in the "delayed entry program" that is, those who have enlisted but have not yet been shipped to boot camp - as a way to make sure it has enough recruits in its pipeline to keep training camps fully manned in the coming months. That number has declined to about 23 percent of the total number of recruits being shipped this year — the lowest percentage in three years, said Lt. Col. Bryan Hilferty, a spokesman for the Army's personnel of-

"It is an indicator that troubles us, but it isn't shocking," Hilferty said. He said Army officials believe that the situation is "cyclical" and likely to recover.

The slippage, Hilferty said, reflects statistical factors more than a new reluctance among American youth — the Army, he said, has expanded its training base, and so can take in more recruits rather than making them wait for spaces to become avail-

Overall, Hilferty said, Army officials continue to watch the recruiting situation with concern but remain confident that they will meet their targets. The Army's total recruiting target for this year was recently raised from 71,500, and is expected to be set at about 7,500, Hilferty said "There's no doubt that we'll make this year's mission, and we're confi dent we'll make next

" he said. Of his boss, Lt. Gen. Franklin Hagenbeck the head of Army personnel, Hilferty said, "He's concerned about recruiting and retention - but he's always concerned about recruiting and retention. Members of Congress also are express-ing concern, especially about the National Guard and Reserve, which have seen their recruiting become more difficult in recent months as they have taken on more of the burden of the Iraq occupation. The Guard and Reserve make up about 40 percent of the 146,000 U.S. troops there. "I heard yesterday from the National Guard back home in Missouri that their retention is, as a result of today's situation, sliding downhill very, very fast," Rep. Ike Skelton, D-Mo., said at a hearing Wednesday of the House Armed Services Commit-yond their planned tours of 12 months there, it has used "stop loss" to require some soldiers to stay in the Army after their scheduled end of service, and it has recalled thousands of other soldiers who have left active duty and are part of the Individual Ready Reserve. So far, the Army has called up 5,600 sol diers from the IRR, and about 9,500 of the soldiers on active duty as of Sept. 30 will be part of the stop-loss program percent of the entire Army, said Brig. Gen. Sean Byrne, the Army's director of military personnel policy. Sen. Jack Reed, D-R.I., a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said in an interview Wednesday that the Army is clearly stretched too thin in both personnel and equipment, as both take a battering during serious conflicts such as Iraq and Afghanistan. He said using stop loss and the IRR to fill the gaps are dangerous

"There's huge pressure to find any way to make their numbers," said Reed, who has worked to increase the size of the Army and believes the force still needs more. "They're just improvising every day The fear I have is that there's an immediate cost, but also a much more profound long-term cost

The latest indication of the strain on the Army is the new disclosure about worries about the size of the delayed entry pool. In 2001, the number of future soldiers in the pool, as a percentage of the total number of recruits joining the Army that year, declined to 22 percent, about where the ratio is now, Hilferty said. And a year earlier it had slipped to 19 percent. Historically, the Army is most comfortable when the level is around 35 percent, indicating that about one in three of the people who will go to basic training over the next 12 months already has signed up to join the Army.

Bigger Army would hurt modernization program, general tells Congress

BY PAULINE JELINEK The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Spending money on a permanent increase in U.S. Army troops would hamper efforts to modernize the service, the Army's top general said Wednesday.

Gen. Peter J. Schoomaker renewed the Pentagon argument that the military can get through the current high level of deployments with temporary increases such as mobilizing more National Guard and Reserve forces and encouraging more soldiers to re-en-list at the end of their duty.

"We are growing the Army as fast as we can grow the Army, he told the House Armed Services Committee. He was speaking at a hearing into Army transfor mation - the effort in recent vears to switch from Cold War posture and make the service faster, lighter and more able to quick-ly deal with today's threats.

Against Bush administration wishes, the Senate and House have voted to add tens of thoutroops to stretched thin when the war on Iraq was launched on top of the global war on terror.

The two different bills must still be reconciled. The Senate wants to add 20,000 soldiers and the House 30,000 soldiers and 9,000 Marines to help solve the problem of an extremely high use of reservists as well as repeated and extended deployments for active duty and reserve.

Some lawmakers say they've also heard constituent complaints about the use of stop loss to bolster Army numbers.

Schoomaker said the disagreement is not over whether the Army needs to be bigger, but over how to pay for it and wheth-"we should encumber ourselves ... in the out years with in-creased permanent" troop num-

"If we are encumbered, we end up trading off ... our modernization and transformational capability," he said.

Committee member Ren Ellen O. Tauscher disagreed after the hearing, saying the stop-loss action and recent call-up of former soldiers in the Individual Ready Reserve "are desperate tactics that will cause difficulties with recruitment and retention.

Hi!, my name is Kirsten, I'm a 13 year old girl, living in Utah. I would like to thank you for risking you life to defend our world!... I hope you are safe. In the end the Iraqi people will be glad that you are there, soon they will be free. I hope all is going well for I'm getting ready to dance in my talent show at the jr. high. I also dance at a studio and we are getting ready to go to New York. Hope you are back by then.

I hope that you will get a chance to write back. my goal is to write a note every night. --Kirsten!!!-- my family and i watch your faces on tv all day and night, i am supporting you by only sleeping four hours every twenty. Our hearts are with you. Herb

Nathan, I want to wish you the best for the rest of your time overseas. As a dedicated hard working soldier/leader in the military what you do day to day isn't going unappreciated . Now that I wish you the best and I'll see you soon Love Tonya

IN THE STATES

9/11 panel: U.S. didn't appreciate threat

BY HOPE YEN

WASHINGTON — The United States could not protect its citizens from the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks because it failed to appreciate the threat posed by al-Qaida operatives who exploited that failure to carry out the deadliest assault ever on American soil, the chairman of the Sept. 11 commission said Thursday.

In issuing the panel's 567-page final report, commission chairman Tom Kean said none of the government's efforts to thwart a known threat from al-Qaida had "disturbed or even delayed" Osama bin Laden's plot.

"[They] penetrated the defenses of the most powerful nation in the world," Kean said. "They inflicted unbearable trauma on our people, and at the same time they turned the international order unside down."

While faulting institutional shortcomings, the report did not blame President Bush or former President Clinton for mistakes contributing to the 2001 attack.

Kean and commission vice chairman Lee Hamilton presented Bush with a copy of the report Thursday morning. Bush thanked them for a "really good job" and said the panel makes "very solid, sound recommendations about how to move forward".

"I assured them that where the government needs to act, we will," Bush said.

Surviving Sept. 11 victims and the families of the dead vowed to continue to chip away at the bureaucratic rigidity they said is really to

"The idea is to get past that resistance and move forward," said Martha Sanders of Darien, Conn., whose daughter Stacey perished at the World Trade Center.

The commission recommended creating a new intelligence center and high-level intelligence director to improve the nation's ability to disrupt future terrorist attacks. An intelligence-gathering center would bring a unified command to the more than one dozen agencies that now collect and analyze intelligence overseas and at home.

Running the center would be a new Senate-confirmed national intelligence director, reporting directly to the president at just below full Cabinet rank, with control over intelligence budgets and the ability to hire and fire deputies, including the CIA director and top intelligence officials at the FBI, Homeland Security Department and Defense Department.

The panel also determined the "most important failure" leading to the Sept. 11 attacks "was one of imagination. We do not believe leaders understood the gravity of the threat."

points of vulnerability" in the Sept. 11 plot that might have led to its disruption had the government been better organized and more watchful. Despite these opportunities, "we cannot know whether any single step or series of steps would have defeated" the 19 hijackers, the report concluded.

man, appealed for political unity at the heights of America's power. A "shift in mind-set and organization" within the U.S. intelligence apparatus and a smoother transition between presidencies are also necessary, he said, to ensure "that this nation does not lower its guard every four or eight years."

The highly anticipated report provided new details on contacts between Iraq and al-Quida, noting that Osama bin Laden began exploring a possible alliance in the early 1990s. Intelligence indicates that Iraq may have offered bin Laden safe haven, but he declined after apparently deciding that Afghanistan was a better location. The report says although there were some "friendly contacts" between Iraq and al-Quida and a common have tred of the United States, none of these contacts "ever developed into a collaborative relationship" and that Iraq was not involved in the Sept. 11 attacks.

That question has been the subject of intense political debate, as critics say Bush exaggerated the contacts between al-Qaida and Iraq to justify the war.

The panel said it did not find evidence that Iran had advance knowledge of bin Laden's plans, or that Saudi Arabia's government had a role in the terror conspiracy, which involved 15 Saudi hijackers.

But both Kean and Hamilton said the United States should look into the possibility of ties between Iran and al-Qaida. And Hamilton urged developing a U.S.-Saudi relationship that revolves around political, economic and educational reforms within the Saudi kingdom.

Given new warnings about al-Qaida's desire to strike again on a mass scale, commission member James R. Thompson said all American leaders would be wise to take the commission's findings to heart.

The report, which is the culmination of a 20-month investigation into the plot that killed nearly 3,000 people in New York, Washington and Pennsylvania, describes the meticulous planning of hijackers who sought to exploit weaknesses in airline and border procedures by taking test flights.

Operational failures cited by 9/11 panel

The Associated Press

The Sept. 11 commission's final report outlined this series of "operational failures" by the government that allowed the terrorists to carry out their plot.

■ Failing to include hijackers Khalid al-Mihdhar and Nawaf al-Hazmi on a watch list. The two were linked by the CIA to al-Qaida and were known to have entered the United States in the summer of 2001, but government agents lost track of them. The two would later board American Airlines Flight 77, which slammed into the Pentagon.

■ Not sharing information linking individuals in the October 2000 bombing of the USS Cole in Yemen to al-Mindhar, who had contacts with a longtime FBI informant. The Cole attack killed 17 American sailors.

■ Not taking adequate steps in time to find al-Mihdhar and al-Hazmi in the United States.

■ Not linking the August 2001 arrest of Zacarias Moussaoui to the threat of an upcoming attack. Moussaoui was arrested after arousing suspicions at a Minnesota flight school. He has admitted belonging to al-Qaida but denied he was part of the plot.

■ Not discovering false statements on visa applications of some of the future hijackers.

■ Not recognizing that some hijackers' passports were fraudu-

■ Failing to expand no-fly lists to include names from terrorist watch lists.

■ Not searching airline passengers identified by a computer-based airline screening system known as the Computer-Assisted Passenger Pre-screening System.

■ Not hardening aircraft cockpit doors or taking other measures to prepare for the possibility of suicide hijackings.

Tighter airport security still a work in progress

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Nearly three years after the Sept. 11 attacks, two key elements of the Bush administration's effort to bolster airport security remain works in progress: more rigorous background checks of passengers and a better way to check for explosives in lugage.

A plan to prescreen air Travelers for terrorist connections, once described by the administration as an urgent need, has been sent back to the drawing board. And only eight of 441 commercial airports have systems recognized as the best at quickly and effectively screening checked baggage.

The reasons for the delays are varied. Technology problems and privacy concerns doomed the passenger prescreening program, while the enormous cost has held up progress installing large bomb-screening machines in airports.

The Transportation Security Administration said in January that the prescreening project—called Computer-Assisted Passenger Pre-screening System, or CAPPS II —could be up and running this summer. But the agency never was able to allay concerns about privacy, and last week acting TSA Administrator David Stone said CAPPS II would be "reshaped and repackaged."

Airlines have been responsible for determining which passengers get extra attention at security checkpoints. Since the 1980s, they've been using such criteria as whether a passenger is flying one-way or pays for a ticket with cash. Screeners also select passengers for extra atten-

That system, though, is viewed as ineffective because it flags too many people and doesn't confirm their identities.

CAPPS II would have used commercial databases to verify passengers' identity. Privacy advocates and airlines were concerned about the invasiveness of such data-mining, which could wrongly suggest people are terrorists because of inaccurate data.

An aide to Homeland Security Secretary Tom Ridge said the newest version of passenger prescreening would still check names against watch lists, but it's unclear what data would be

Homeland Security spokesman Dennis Murphy said CAPPS II was just part of a comprehensive approach to aviation

The number of federal air marshals grew to thousands from just a few dozen on Sept. 11, 2001.

House GOP: Judges should leave marriage alone

BY MARK SHERMAN The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Federal judges should keep their hands off marriage, House of Representatives Republicans said Thursday, pressing for passage of legislation to give states final say over recognizing same-sex unions sanctioned elsewhere.

Federal judges, unelected and lifetime appointments. must not be allowed to rewrite marriage policy for the states Rep. Sue Myrick of North Carolina said at the start of a debate tinged by election-year politics.

Republican leaders predicted easy passage for the Marriage Protection Act, a week after the Senate dealt gav marriage opponents a setback by failing to advance a constitutional amendment to ban same-sex unions. The legislation would strip the Supreme Court and other federal courts of their jurisdiction to rule on challenges to state bans on gay marriages under a provision of a 1996 federal law that defines marriage as between a man and a constituency

The Bush administration supnorts the measure

Democrats said the bill's supporters were trying to change the subject from GOP failures to pass a budget and other major legislation, while at the same time appealing to socially conservative voters who are a key Republican

"This bill is quite simply a mean-spirited, misguided and discriminatory distraction," Massachusetts Rep. Jim McGovern "The leadership of the House has decided to throw its political base some red meat

McGovern said Republicans' desire to rein in federal judges rings hollow three years after the 5-4 Supreme Court decision that handed George W. Bush the presi dency. "They had no problem with activist judges in Bush ver-sus Gore," he said.

Adding to Democrats' sense that the House legislation is motivated by politics is that no federal court has yet ruled on the 1996 law, the Defense of Marriage Act. "The legislation is premature,

Rep. Jerrold Nadler of New York told the House Rules Committee on Wednesday

Nadler said he believes the legislation is unconstitutional, but legal scholars said the constitutional question of stripping jurisdiction from federal courts is unresolved.

"My sense is that Congress has explicit authority in the Constitution ... but it is a largely unexersaid power," Kmiec, a Pepperdine University constitutional law professor and former legal adviser to Republi-

FDA rules Botox can be used to treat excessive sweat

Knight Ridder Newspapers

WASHINGTON - Botox, the drug made famous by millions of unwrinkled brows, won the government's approval Tuesday to tackle another of the body's flaws: sweaty armpits.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved the therapeutic use of Botox to treat severe underarm sweating, said Caroline Van Hove, senior manager of corporate communications for Allergan Inc., the maker of Botov

Currently, 1.3 million Americans suffer from a severe sweat gland malady that produces four to five times normal sweating, according to Van Hove. Now, she said, they can get relief from an injection of Botox directly into their sweat glands. The treatment costs $750. Until now, treatment included surgery, the application of a powerful topical antiperspirant and saltwater injections, said

Dee Anna Glaser, vice chairman and associate professor at St. Louis University Medical School's Department of Dermatology. Van Hove described the side effects of the Botox treatment as "temporary and mild in nature," but may include allergic reactions, neck or back pain and anxiety.

The FDA first approved Botox in December 1989 to treat two eye muscle disorders, blepharospasm and strabismus.

It was then approved to treat cervical dystonia, a neurological movement disorder causing severe neck and shoulder muscle contractions and in 2002 as Botov Cosmetic to temporarily erase frown lines between the eyebrows in patients between 18 and 65 years of age

Botox paralyzes the sweat gland by blocking the nerve that stimulates sweat, Van Hove said.

Glaser said she has been treating severe underarm sweat for 15 years and has been using Botox as a treatment for at least seven years. The recent FDA approval means Allergan can now advertise the product. Dr. Mitchell Brin, senior vice president of development for Botox and Neurology at Allergan, described the approval as "another milestone in the histo-

Insurance companies do not cover the use of Botox for this condition, because it's a new treatment. But the company considers the ailment a "serious medical condition," so Allergan offers financial incentives for people who cannot afford Botox injections, Van Hove said.

Muslims not 'enemy within'

I do appreciate R. Barnes' encourage ment and support of the troops defending the country we love so dearly and our ef forts at trying to stabilize Iraq and make it a better place for the Iraqi people (Messages of Support, July 15). For this, I would like to give him a sincere "thank you. [His] taking the time to write a letter to us is highly commendable and really helps our morale out here.

However, I am a Muslim-American serving in the U.S. Air Force and have given my beloved country and its dear citizens 12 honorable years of my life.

In service. I have earned numerous medals, including an Army Achievement Medal from the surgeon general of the Army, 24 letters of commendation, presented 28 coins for excellence, a Stripes For Exceptional Performer promotion, selected and attended the intense USAF Honor Guard training camp in Washington, D.C., and was certified.

I have been a representative of the Unit-ed States and the U.S. armed forces in France and have been given numerous accolades of commendation by the American Embassy in Paris. I was a member of the presidential Color Guard that received then-President Clinton, who shook my hand and signed my ceremonial glove dur ing a visit to Ramstein Air Base, Germany.

I respectfully carried the flag-draped transfer cases of the blown-up remains of my fellow citizens during the 1998 American Embassy terror bombings in Tanzania and Kenva, and fought back the tears with my fellow ceremonial guardsmen as we stood at attention over their remains on that dark aircraft

I am on my third deployment to the Middle East; the second of which just ended in March, but I put in a special request to be sent to Balad Air Base/Logistical Support Area Anaconda, the most heavily bombarded base in Iraq, where I am currently deployed after a two-month break between deployments. Why? Because of honor, duty and commitment to my Air Force and my country.

We are attacked by mortar and rocket fire almost on a daily basis here.

Am I the "enemy within"? Do I need to have "an extensive background check" to prove my loyalty to my country and countrymen? Am I at war with America or is she at war with me?

My situation is not uncommon in the U.S. military. Many Muslim-Americans are very high achievers and seek to set or exceed the standards as I am sure many of my comrades who have had Muslim co-workers can attest to who have had Muslim co-workers.

Muslim-Americans have been serving honorably in the U.S. armed forces and will continue to do so. We are willing to sacrifice ourselves, and have, along with our fellow servicemen and women in preserving [R. Bar-

Air Force cutting 'luxuries'?

Airmen in Europe woke up July 21 to a bold type headline in Stars and Stripes. It detailed the necessary cuts in "luxuries" at U.S. Air Forces in Europe bases to make up for budget shortfalls due to the war ef-

I have no problem with airmen "sucking it up" and doing some additional cleaning due to the cutting of some base cleaning contractors, or having to bring their own towels to the gym. I don't think they do, ei-I was, however, rather surprised to learn that at Spangdahlem Air Base, as a result of cuts in vehicle maintenance, "aircraft maintainers are lugging their tools by foot along miles of flight line instead of riding in a pickup or van.'

Is that a "luxury" being cut? Are others out there as confused as I am about what constitutes a priority in wartime?

At Ramstein Air Base, we have watched as beautiful stone walls have been con structed at numerous locations apparently in an attempt to beautify the base by cover ing up (admittedly unattractive) trash receptacles and other areas deemed worthy of covering up. We have also seen miles of fence being covered with green plastic covering

I don't know what all of this cost, but I am fairly certain the attractive stone and the German labor aren't cheap. Are there security considerations here that I don't understand? Are the funds for these items coming out of some "other budget that doesn't take away anything from the war effort?

While I can't speak for the airmen. I imagine many found the July 21 headline both confusing and disturbing in light of how they see Department of Defense money being spent when the military is on a war footing.

Series told how GIs are living

Stars and Stripes' survey of U.S. troops in Iraq ("Ground Truth," Oct. 15-21, 2003) is awesome journalism. As an Army enlisted Vietnam veteran. I was interested in the GIs' reports on their living conditions. We never got to call home for the year.

so the complaints about poor phone or Internet service seemed weak. I think we got to shower more, and that is big for morale, cleanliness and keeping skin diseases down. There was no mention of drinking beer or chasing local women, so I guess we had the edge there in Vietnam. I ran into an Iraq Military Police veteran at a Veterans for Kerry event, and I toasted him with a beer because I thought he had none in Iraq. He said that the MPs would confiscate coolers of Corona from Iraqi motorists, which went to the MPs so at least some GIs are getting cool brews!

As for bunking, you can live on a mat with a sleeping bag for a year if you are a voung buckaroo, and using a slit latrine won't kill you. The lack of air conditioning in the desert summer probably would be the worst thing. I think what stands out the most from the articles is the stark difference between the living conditions of the headquarters pogues (you know who you are) and the troops in the field. The troops on the line need the good billets or, at least, they need to know that the generals aren't kicking back in air-conditioned palaces. But, gee, I seem to remember the brass living it up in Saigon while we were slogging through the monsoon eating crap, so maybe it's the same old story. I hope all of our troops get home soon, safe and sound. Tom Harriman

Drop in post allowance

In the past six months the Army Civilian Post Allowance has been reduced twice, this time from 25 percent to 20 percent. This comes in a time when fuel prices have topped out at record prices and the euro rate is still very low. For example, at today's prices, super unleaded fuel is 59.1 cents a liter and that is un one cent since last month Today's rate is approximately 78 cents to 1 euro. I don't understand why the post allowance is being reduced. Am I the only one who doesn't get it? I think not. Charles C. Jones

Defining the enemy important in terror war

BY LEE H. HAMILTON WASHINGTON

o public policy can succeed in a democracy without broad and sus tained public understanding and support. All Americans — and policy-makers - must heed this truth as we combat terrorism in the decades to come Since Sept. 11, 2001 words such as "al-Oaida" and "weapons of mass destruction" are heard at the local coffee shop. Shelves of books have appeared on terrorism, U.S. foreign policy and Islam. New security procedures are apparent everywhere from the airport terminal to the ballpark. Voters indicate they want counterterrorism plans as much as health-care

We're still figuring out how to act abroad, organize our government, set priorities and defend our communities. We have taken initial steps, but we are in for a marathon, not unlike the challenge facing Americans on the brink of the Cold War. Now, as then, success depends upon developing and sustaining policies grounded in the understanding support and resolve of the American public To begin with, Americans must continue to acquaint themselves with the Islamic world. Specifically, we need a pool of ex-perts and diplomats who speak certain languages, and comprehend diverse and far-flung cultures.

More broadly. Americans need to understand who the enemy is and why they hate us, while understanding that many Muslims resent U.S. policies but reject terrorism. The more we grasp the distinctions between forging policies that enlist the support of moderate Muslims while isolating radicals Right now, terrorists exploit the huge gap in understanding between the United States and the world's Muslims. No silver bullet can close that gap.

What can is the willingness of the Ameri can people to project and support a vision of opportunity - economic, educational and political — to people in distant lands while vigorously defending our interests and securi-

. We cannot wish anti-Americanism away; nor can we withdraw from the world, or succeed through policies that generate more radicals and terrorists. This means thinking about how we can craft and communicate policies that represent both our interests and our values in a durable manner

To succeed, we must determine whether institutions and norms designed in the last century are prepared to tackle new challeng-

For instance, the situations in Afghanistan and Iraq raise questions about whether we want a military that manages peace as well as it wages war.

The failures to foresee 9/11 and evaluate Iraq's WMD shed disturbing light on how our intelligence agencies are structured and function. The ease with which terrorists crossed our borders and exploited our open society challenges us to think about how we issue documents such as a passport or driv-

Public awareness can start even closer to home, far from the international or national debate. Is your local hospital equipped to handle an anthrax attack? Are your emergen-cy responders prepared? Is the chemical plant on the edge of town secure?

Dealing with these questions does not make you a doomsayer. On the contrary, your efforts can have complementary benefits such as bolstering the public health sys tem or better securing dangerous infrastruc-

What is distinct about the struggle against terrorism is that individual citizens can make an extraordinary difference. These aren't just issues for study and debate.

Think of the passenger and flight attendant who found it odd that Richard Reid, the alleged "shoe bomber," was lighting a match near his shoe, and took action. We are in a struggle that depends upon individual action as much as public policy. Government leaders must serve as both representatives of the people's interests in Washington and educators of the constituents back home. Government works best when it reflects the will of an informed and engaged public.

The rancor and confusion that have swirled around many policy choices in the struggle against terrorism indicate that we can do better in putting partisan politics aside to build a consensus that is informed, effectual and lasting.

We are all adapting to new forms of risk Finding our way through this challenge will be tough. Only by tapping the idealism, innovation and toughness of the American people can we sustain successful policies. Put me down on the side of the optimists.

So far, Kerry tumbles when push comes to shove

BY MICHAEL GOODWIN

New York Daily News

ohn Kerry is about to be crowned King of all Democrats and he's got at least a 50-50 shot at being the 44th president of the United States. Sen. Hillary Clinton is but one of 100 senators Any clash between the two should thus be a mismatch — and it was, Sen, Kerry never stood a chance.

If you're scoring at home, that's Clinton 1. Kerry 0

What's amazing about the spat over whether Clinton would get a prime-time convention speech was how quickly Kerry retreated. No sooner had his aides insulted Clinton by saving, first, she hadn't asked for a role and second, the convention was about the "future," they caved and asked her to speak Begged would be more accurate Kerry's the king all right, but Clinton's the unchallenged Queen of Democrats - and the King better not forget it again.

Her supporters rejoiced at her triumph, but Republicans must be delighted, too, for the embarrassing incident reveals a weak spot in the Democratic nominee. Kerry is a man who can be rolled. Quickly and often.

His surrender to Clinton was one of three cases in just a week where Kerry took a stand, then immediately folded his cards when challenged. .

The first case involved the July 8 Bush-bash at Radio City Music Hall. A day after he praised Whoopi Goldberg and others as representing the "heart and soul of America," Kerry wilted in the face of media and GOP heat. Suddenly, he found Gold-

And on the same day as the Clinton fold. Kerry backed away from some of his own TV ads when black officials called them "lackluster."

Only a week after touting the $2 million buy as the largest ever aimed at black voters, Kerry agreed to scrap the ads. Rep. Elijah Cummings, D-Md., chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus, said Kerry flubbed by not showing the ads to the caucus first. "It was corrected," Cummings said as Kerry agreed to the changes the caucus wanted

Final score: Critics 3, Kerry 0, None of these incidents is fatal at this early stage, and Dem partisans will even argue they show a nuanced thinker willing to listen and change his mind But it's also true that the three incidents play into the GOP attack machine theme that Kerry is a flip-flopper who can't be trusted. Even a top Dem stalwart conceded there are doubts about Kerry's "internal gyro-

Such doubts worry this Kerry supporter because of how he views the election land-scape.... To win, my Democratic sage says. Kerry must meet two tests: "He must convince people that he has a strong foreign policy, and he must show middle-class families that he cares about them and understands their problems."

He's right, but here's a third challenge Kerry needs a Sister Souliah moment

It was 12 years ago, just before his own crowning convention, that Bill Clinton demonstrated strength and independence by scolding the young black rap singer. She had defended Los Angeles riots by saying, black people kill black people every day, why not have a week and kill white people." Clinton not only said the comments reflect-

"hatred," he did so at Jesse Jackson's Rainbow Coalition. Sister Souljah then called Clinton "racist," and Jackson was furi-ous at him, too. But Clinton stood his ground, and the incident established his willi to say no and risk offending a key party voting bloc

Kerry has not yet taken such a risk. When he does, he'll be a stronger, more worthy candidate for the Oval Office.

Truck runs into eatery

NC SWANN — A dump truck careened off a highway Monday and barreled into a sea food restaurant just after lunch hour, injuring at least three people, authorities said.

Three natients were taken by ambulance to Central Carolina Hospital in Sanford, said Dianne Raynor. communications director for the Harnett County Sheriff's Department.

Peggy's Seafood Restaurant is about 40 miles southwest of Raleigh. Television footage showed the truck about halfway into a corner of the restaurant.

No one answered the telephone at the restaurant after the 1:30 p.m. crash. Authorities had not determined the cause.

New hurricane guides

COVINGTON — New electronic signs will be used to help steer traffic to the proper routes should the New Orleans metropolitan area face an evacuation during hurricane season. The signs will be located along Interstates 10, 12 and 59 in St. Tammany Parish and on Interstate 10 in St. John the Baptist Parish.

SOUTH BEND - US Airways has decided to end its service at South Bend Regional Airport beginning next month, airport officials said.

The air carrier's four daily flights from South Bend to Pitts-burgh are to end Sept. 7. The carrier accounts for about 11 percent of the airport's commercial passen-

"I hate to lose this service," said John Schalliol, the airport executive director. "We have had them since December 1982."

Twelve US Airways workers will lose their jobs in South Bend, Schalliol said.

Brochure do-over

ORLANDO - U.S. authorities agreed to rewrite train-ing guidelines for a program that would teach firefighters and workers who regularly go into homes to report signs of terrorist activity.

The decision to scrap 5,000 printed brochures came a week after civil rights advocates criticized the plan. The new guidelines will remove references to particular ethnic groups

The brochure cautioned that 'multiple adult males living together, usually of Middle Eastern appearance and between the ages of 18 and 45, with little or no furnishings" could signal international terrorism.

NJ SOUTHAMPTON — A key

highway link between Phila delphia and the Jersey Shore was restored with the opening of a temporary bridge on Route 70. The bridge spanning Friendship Creek was washed out by floodwaters that ravaged portions of southern New Jersey a week ago. Officials hope to have a permanent replacement in operation by Labor Day weekend.

Ex-governor remembered

GA ATLANTA — Officials paid their respects to former Gov. George Busbee as his body lay in state at the Capitol rotunda. Gov. Sonny Perdue and former Govs. Carl Sanders and Joe Frank Harris led Georgia's official delegation. Busbee, who was governor from 1975 to 1983, died last week of an apparent heart attack. He was 76.

Lottery booms

MN WEST ST. PAUL — The Minnesota Lottery generated a record $100 million for the state last year, Gov. Pawlenty said.

Profits are up about 20 percent from the previous year. Acting Director Mike Vekich credited increased sales and cost-cutting moves. The news comes during a year when the lottery's founding director died and the legislative auditor issued a scathing report.

Limit on lunk food

HEBER CITY - The Wasatch School District has become the first in Utah to limit sales of sweets and junk food to pupils.

The policy as originally pro-posed would have completely banned soda pop and candy in vending machines. As adopted, it requires 70 percent of student vending machine offerings to be water, milk, 100 percent fruit juices and food meeting the district's minimum nutritional standards.

Rio not so grande

NM BOSQUE FARMS — The Rio Grande is drying out in a stretch south of Albuquerque, and biologists are working on what's become an annual event rescuing endangered Rio Grande minnows stranded in isolated pools of water.

Early on a recent morning, Mike Hatch and Keith Basham and other teams were dragging nets through the pools, searching for the tiny minnows, in 23 miles of the river that have dried out between Isleta Pueblo and Elephant Butte.

"Lots of things are perishing out here," said Basham. "There's a lot we can't do.

Rewarded for integrity

MIAMI - A guilt-ridden fugitive who turned himself in after 20 years served just 45 days in prison for drug smuggling because a judge was moved by the man's integrity.

Rene Alzugaray-Cira, 62, who had been held in Miami's Federal Detention Center since he turned himself in last month, could have been sentenced to 10 years.

"Go home to your daughter and your little grandbabies and live out the rest of your life," Senior U.S. District Judge James Lawrence King said Thursday in sentencing Alzugaray to time served.

Alzugaray was arrested in 1984

after he was found on a boat loaded with marijuana. He pleaded guilty - though in court this week he said he was never a smuggler - but skipped his sentencing. "I was scared," he said. "I panicked because I thought I would be going to prison for a long time.' For two decades, Alzugarav built lobster traps and picked vegetables in Florida. But in the past year, he reunited with his adult daughter, who urged him to turn himself in to ease his troubled conscience.

Cops accused in beating

NY NEW YORK — Three police officers were arraigned on charges that they beat a taxi driver near a Brooklyn mosque and then made false statements about what happened.

James Feola, Gregory Hepp and Francis Sanzone pleaded innocent to charges of second-degree assault during an appearance Friday in Brooklyn Supreme Court. Hepp and Feola also face perjury charges for allegedly making false sworn statements accusing the driver of assaulting them.

If convicted of assault, each of the officers could face seven years in prison.

The alleged beating occurred March 8 outside a mosque on Fulton Street in the Bedford-Stuvvesant section, after the officers gave Boris Nkari, 31, a $115 ticket for double-parking, authorities said.

Andre 3000, 30, is the flashier side of the hip-hop duo OutKast. OutKast's hip-hoppy jive won three trophies at the 2004 Grammy Awards: best urban-alternative performance for "Hey Ya!" and best rap album and overall album of the year for "Speaker-boxxx/The Love Below." It was the first rap album to win most of the awards in top categories. Silverstone, 27, has starred in films including "Clueless" and "Batman &

Noth on tour in Jerusalem

Chris Noth, who played Mr. Big on HBO's "Sex and the City," greeted fans in Israel at Judaism's holiest site, the Western Wall in the Old City of Jerusalem

Noth is on a 10-day tour of Israel, sponsored by the Israeli Tourism Ministry. He also filmed a commercial Monday for a brand of Israeli deodorant.

"I feel great solidarity, as a New Yorker, being here in Israel," the actor told reporters Tuesday. "I hope to show Americans that they should come here

Incoming Tourism Minister Gideon Ezra presented Noth with a certificate of appreciation

"This visit is very important to us," Ezra told The Associated Press. "Many celebrities have come to Israel, and we take very good care of our visitors. "Sex and the City," starring Sarah Jessica Parker, was shown on a local TV channel and gained wide popularity among Israelis. Noth played one of Parker's boyfriends on the show. which ran for six seasons.He recently finished filming a new movie, "The Perfect Man.

R.E.M. steeple needs help

The steeple of St. Mary's Episcopal Church in Athens, Ga., where the band R.E.M. first performed together in 1980, is in dire need of restoration and its owners are offering to give it away to someone willing to take on the expen-

The 135-year-old steeple is all that remains of the church after it was destroyed in 1990 to build a condominium com-plex. The owners of the Steeplechase condos kept the spire as a historic artifact, but the group is too small to raise the funds necessary to restore it.

Condo association manager Kate Hinton said the owners want to give the artifact to someone able to afford the restoration

In 1980, R.E.M. lead singer Michael Stipe and guitarist Peter Buck moved into converted apartments in the church and held the band's earliest practices there. The group, which also included bassist Mike Mills and drummer Bill Berry, gained international prominence with hits including "Losing My Religion" and helped solidify Athens' reputation as a launching pad for popular music

New film 'I, Robot' is simply one more chance to prove Will Smith owns the summer season

BY JOE NEUMAIER New York Daily News

Summertime is synonymous with Will Smith. Starting with "Independence Day" in 1996, the 35-year-old actor has starred in a bunch of big-budget action-adventure films released in prime blockbuster slots in early July. His test, "I, Robot," opened in the States last week.

While there's more to Smith than his solar-powered smile and thermonuclear charm, he knows what season works best for his brand of star power.

'There's a connection I have with summer audiences — I know what this time of year means at the movies, I know what people are doing with their families, and I know what they need to start off their vacations," says Smith. "It's been July 4 for a lot of years — that's Big Willie Weekend! People feel they're in good hands. I know what they want."

He isn't about to upset the apple cart. Though Smith was Oscar-nominated for his performance as Muhammad Ali in 2001's "Ali," and has given good performances in such serious movies as "Six Degrees of Separation" and "The Legend of Bagger Vance," if he harbors unsatisfied creative yearnings, he's keeping them to himself.
Sequels like "Men in Black II" and "Bad Boys II" further suggest Hollywood doesn't want the star to stray far from his successful formula

Smith says only the physical strain of action films may force him to give up the genre by the time he hits his 40s. Rather than feeling limited, he says he's adding subtext to his blockbusters "As I get older, it's going to be a necessity to have ideas in these films - you can only save the world so many times before people start saying 'All right buddy, we got it,' " he says. "Audiences are going to reject action movies where you just blow stuff up and a guy looks cool. These films need to be intellectually stimulating. "After 'Ali,' I went back to [action films], back to that comfort. Some people, once they get an Oscar nomination, they get the bug to only do serious films. For me, I know I'll have time for that, so I didn't want to lose my connection to the youngster in me.

"I feel confident at this point that I can pretty much do what I want. I've found a comfortable creative freedom.

It's my decision which side of myself to show."

"I, Robot," based loosely on Isaac Asi "I, Robot," based loosely on Isaac Asimov's 1950 short-story collection, reflects Smith's desire to make an adventure that takes place in a murkier moral universe.

He plays a Chicago detective in 2035, who investigates a robot accused of murder. Like "Blade Runner" and "Minority Report," the film touches on the idea of whether it's emotion, intelligence or violence that makes humans unique.

Nelson George, author of "Buppies, B-Boys, Baps, and Bohos: Notes on Post-Soul Black Culture," says that Smith occupies a unique place in pop culture.

"There haven't been many black performers like him—there's nothing brooding about him, you don't feel any anger, the same as when he first made music in the '80s eople are attracted to his aura. There may be dark cor ners to Will, but you don't see them.

On New Year's Eve in 1997, Smith married actress Jada Pinkett ("The Matrix Reloaded," "The Nutty Professor"), whom he met when she auditioned for a role on "Fresh Prince." The two were friends through Smith's three-year marriage to actress Sheree Zampino, whom he divorced in 1995 and with whom he has a son, Trey, now 11.
Though he and Pinkett Smith are looked at as one of Hollywood's most successful couples, he says the onscreen ro-mance of "The Last First Kiss," which he is currently filming, is undiscovered territory.

"Young black couples will walk up to me and Jada on the street and say, 'Y'all got to stay together, because if you guys can't make it, none of us can!' We love that.

"But I've only recently gotten comfortable with movie ro-mance. I've never wanted any woman to feel like I'm disrespecting her, and that's created a distance in my roles. I think there's a certain energy that you need in order to cre-ate [romance in movies]." Smith's personal energy, though, has never been in doubt

"There's real pleasure that I get out of being happy and getting people energized — that's when I'm at my best," he "I need that dynamic both selfishly and selflessly: I try to encourage everyone around me to go someplace different artistically, to think differently."

Does that ever get exhausting for his wife?
"Jada and I can [talk] about things for hours, but when other people are around, yeah, I can wear her out," Smith says, flashing his killer grin. "I think my energy can get a little oppressive for her. But she understands that it's a life-force for our relationship, as much as it might get on

Dear Abby: My husband, "Ned," lost his mother suddenly at the age of 54. Her wishes were to be cremated and have h cremains scattered in the Arizo

I returned home from work and once again, the cremains had been put back in our bedroom — this time on the nightstand next to our bed In addition, the cremains did not all fit into the urn, so a second box was sent along with the urn. With time, the box has separated and started to leak

I think it's unhealthy to continue to have the cremains in the house, and I also feel it's disre spectful to my mother-in-law How can you be firm and loving at the same time?

Dear Woeful: It appears your husband is having a difficult time letting go. I recommend you sweep up the cremains that have leaked out of the box and place them in a baggie. When you husband is in a relaxed, and hope fully receptive, mood give it to him and tell him that his mother had asked that her cremains he scattered in Arizona - not the bedroom. Alice is very sensitive, so I'm afraid to say anything to her. Am I wrong to be upset? What should I tell my friends when they ask about her? Is there anything I can say to my sister or my guests that will go over well?

- Hurt in Houston Dear Hurt: Tell your "sensi tive" sister that you are disap pointed that she won't be there to share your happiness (it's the truth), and that she'll be missed (it's also true because her absence will be noticed), and that you'll manage without her (because you will).

Dear Annie: MV father and his siblings inherited a summer beach house from their parents, and it always has been rented out seasonally. No profit has ever been made on the property. At best, it is a break-even investment A few years ago, my aunts and uncles wished to get out of the investment, and my parents bought their shares for fair market value

Suddenly, everyone became emotional, discovering newfound love for the beach house. Since my parents became sole owners, the rest of the family seems to think they are entitled to use the cottage whenever they want. My cousins actually rented the place last year and left it more trashed than any rental client ever has They even took some chimes my parents had hung on the porch.

My mother is infuriated by this, but she says nothing. If it were me, I would put my foot

- Angry Niece in Wisconsin Dear Niece: If your parents don't want to be taken advantage of, they need to remove the "Walk on Me" sign from their backs. Dad should inform his siblings that they must clean up after themselves or the cottage will no longer be available to them (Aunt Freebie included).

And he should make it stick. Also, we strongly recommend your parents do whatever is necessary to find other tenants who will rent the cottage, leaving it less available to accommodate the relatives. If your folks aren't willing to take these steps,

No one wants that, and I'd be to blame. What should I do?

- Lost in Pennsylvania Dear Lost: Whatever Shelly decides to do, it is NOT your fault. She should appreciate the closeness you have now and understand that you need a relationship with your mother as well. She should not feel threatened by it. Discuss your feelings with your father, and tell him we said he should back you up.

Egypt, United States plan Mideast peace conference

Arafat agrees to cede some power; parliament demands more

BY RAMIT PLUSHNICK-MASTI The Associated Pres.

JERUSALEM - The United States, Israel and Egypt are pushing to hold a Mideast peace conference in October to coordinate an Israeli withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and advance an internationally backed peace plan, officials said Thursday The officials said the conference was at the early planning stages and there were obstacles to overcome - including Yasser Arafat's refusal to reform his security forces and corruption-plagued government - before the details can be finalized.

Arafat is in one of his most tenuous political positions since establishing his Palestinian Authority in 1994. His prime minister, Ahmed Qureia, submitted his resignation

Saturday following a wave of kidnappings and mass protests.

Arafat refused to accept the resignation, but Qureia insists he is heading a caretaker government. The Palestinian parliament passed a resolution Wednesday demanding the veteran leader form a new government equipped with powers to provide law and Parliament reconvened Thursday to discuss further pressure tactics.

A Palestinian lawmaker said after the meeting that Arafat has agreed to grant his prime minister full authority over the security forces

In addition, Prime Minister Ariel Sharon is trying to cobble together a coalition government that will back his plan to pullout of the Gaza Strip and four West Bank settlements by October of next year. Labor Party leader Shimon Peres said Sharon's advisers hinted at talks Wednesday that if the left-center party joins the government the pullout could be lemented more quickly

Moshe Debi, an adviser to Israeli Foreign Minis-ter Silvan Shalom, said the sides want to hold the four-way Mideast peace conference — which would include Palestinian officials - in New York at the level of foreign ministers.

But an Egyptian official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said his country preferred to hold the conference in Cairo at the presidential level.

A senior U.S. official, who also asked not to be named, said Washington supports the initiative, which was first proposed by Egypt earlier this

The conference would focus on planning between Israel, Egypt, the United States and the Palestinians for "the day after" an Israeli pullout from Gaza, the U.S. official said.

Israeli officials said it could be difficult for President Bush to become deeply involved in the Middle East a month before the U.S. presidential elections. However, the officials said, if Bush believes it could serve his electoral interests, he might agree to attend a conference on the presidential level.

Like many other drivers, Earnhardt will race anywhere, no matter the risk

BY JENNA FRYER

The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE N.C. ale Earnhardt Jr. spends most of his time scrunched inside the cockpit of a stock car, on a high-speed chase for a NASCAR Nextel Cup championship.

Add up 38 races a year, qualifying, practice and test sessions, Earnhardt probably spends about 700 hours a year in his No. 8 Chevrolet.

So when a free weekend opens up on his schedule, why would the son of the late Dale Earnhardt fly across the country to compete in an American Le Mans Series

"Driving race cars is what I love doing, Earnhardt Jr. said when announcing his participation in last Sunday's race at Infineon Raceway in Sonoma, Calif.

But what was supposed to be a fun, relaxing spin in a Corvette C5-R turned into a frightening accident during practice that could have jeopardized his regular job. His car burst into flames, burning him on his chin and legs

Earnhardt slumped over his steering wheel as the flames engulfed him, and it took several seconds for him to scramble out of the car

Back home in North Carolina, Earnhardt is resting while his Dale Earnhardt Inc. team prepares to race this weekend at New Hampshire International Speedway.

Second in the driver standings, Earnhardt cannot afford to sit out of Sunday's race. Since NASCAR does not have a substi tute driver rule, Earnhardt must start the race to earn points and stay in contention for his first championship DEI plans to have Martin Truex Jr. on standby in case Earnhardt can't finish. Truex has never competed in a Nextel Cup event, but he has tested at New Hampshire to prepare for his series debut there in Sep-

Still, using Truex as an injury replacement is not the ideal scenario for Earnhardt or DEI

In hindsight, Earnhardt probably should have spent his last off weekend of the season at the beach or in the mountains. Heck. even sitting on his couch in his living room would have been a better idea than competing in a race that meant nothing to DEI or the sponsors who pay millions for Earnhardt to drive his red Chevrolet.

But that's not how racers live their lives. "It's what we grew up doing," said ASCAR veteran Ken Schrader, who races in about 60 non-Nextel Cup events.

your job. But racing is still my hobby. It's what I love to do. It seems like if there's a weekend and there's a race, then I'm supnosed to be in it Earnhardt inherited that characteristic from his father, who was killed in a last-lap wreck in the 2001 Daytona 500. Dale Earnhardt introduced his son to extracurricular events, and the two even raced a Corvette together in the Rolex 24 at Daytona International Speedway about a month before the fatal crash.

Besides continuing the family business as the top driver at DEI, Earnhardt Jr. has made occasional appearances non-NASCAR events. Before Sunday, he most recently had teamed with fellow NASCAR star Tony Stewart and Britain's Andy Wallace to nearly win the Rolex race in February.

road racing specialist Boris Said last weekend. Even from his hospital bed after the wreck, he didn't second-guess the decision.

"I'm bummed out and disappointed I couldn't run the race," Earnhardt said in a statement.

But future extracurricular activities will surely be scrutinized.

Budweiser, the primary sponsor of Farnhardt's NASCAR ride, won't prevent him from competing in future races "Although there is always risk in all forms of motorsports, we support Dale Jr.'s efforts to become the most successful driver he can be," said Tony Ponturo of

DEI officials might not feel the same

Wallace fit in so well - and the NBA champions can pay him so much - he decided to stick around

The Pistons called a news conference for Friday morning to announce the signing of the unrestricted free agent forward

Two sources who spoke Wednesday to The Associated Press on the condition of anonymity said the deal is worth $57 million over five years.

His statistics were not always impressive, but his impact almost always was after Detroit acquired him on Feb. 19 for reserves and two first-round picks.

The 6-foot-11, 230-pounder made a stingy defense one of the best in league history and an average offense better.

17, averaged 16 points, 6.8 rebounds, 2.3 assists and 1.8 blocks last season, his ninth in the NBA.

Wallace, who made $17 million last season, was acquired in a three-team deal to put the Pistons over the top

They were among the top teams in the Eastern Conference without Wallace, with a 34-22 record. They were 20-6 in the regular season and 16-7 in the playoffs after adding him.

The Pistons heat the Los Angel les Lakers in five games for their third title, and first since 1990.

Wallace will be one of five returning starters for the NBA champion. He will be backed up by Antonio McDyess, who was signed to replace Mehmet Okur.

Wallace, a Philadelphia native. spent two years at North Carolina before being selected by Washington with the fourth overall pick in the 1995 draft

Wallace was traded to Portland following his rookie year and spent the next seven-plus seasons with the Trail Blazers With his contract expiring. Portland traded Wallace to Atlanta, where he stayed for one game before he was dealt to Detroit just before the trading deadline.

Williams' lawyers resist retrial

The Associated Press

NEWARK, N.J. - Jayson Williams' lawyers say the former NBA star should not be retried for the shooting of a hired driver because it would violate his constitutional protection against being tried twice for the same offense. Besides the double-jeopardy argument, Williams' lawyers said in a motion filed Tuesday that evidence on a charge of reckless manslaughter should not be reintroduced if a retrial takes place. They argue the law forbids it because jurors already acquitted Williams of the more serious charges of aggravated assault and possession of a weapon for an unlawful purpose using the same evidence.

Messages left with prosecutors Wednesday were not immediately returned Williams, 36, is scheduled to be retried Jan 10 on the reckless manslaughter charge. He was acquitted in April of aggravated manslaughter, aggravated assault and possession of a weapon for an unlawful purpose in the shooting death of Costas "Gus" Christofi, but convicted on four counts related to covering up the shooting

Jurors deadlocked on the remaining reckless manslaughter count, however, causing a mistrial and leading prosecutors to pursue a retrial based on the one

In Tuesday's motion, Williams'

lawvers also asked the judge to bar evidence of Williams' conduct after the shooting, saying it is irrelevant. They also say the charge should be dismissed on grounds of prosecutorial miscon-

On Feb. 13, 2002, Williams invited several friends and members of the Harlem Globetrotters to a postgame dinner followed by a tour of his mansion

Christofi, 55, drove four Globeotters from the game and was touring the house with the others when Williams took out a loaded shotgun and snapped it shut in Christofi's direction. The gun discharged and the shot struck Christofi in the chest. He died within minutes.

Magic F Gooden expects to be released

Drew Gooden traveled to Las Vegas from his home in Oakland, Calif., last week to see the future of the Orlando Magic

He liked what he saw in 8-vear-old rookie Dwight 18-year-old Howard, the No. 1 pick in the draft. But he also knew what it meant. Both play power forward.

"I'm on the trading block, no question about that," Gooden said Wednesday from California, "I'm on the Magic roster now - and I'd love to stay my whole career there - but I also understand this business.'

Gooden 22 averaged 11.6 points and 6.5 rebounds last seaon, mostly in a reserve role behind veteran Juwan Howard, who was sent to Houston as part of the trade involving Tracy McGrady. Instead of playing behind a veteran like Howard, Gooden likely will play behind a highly touted, multitalented rookie.

"If you're the No. 1 pick in the draft, the expectations are so high, you're automatically going to be a starter." he said. "And that's fine. He's a physical specimen. I would love to be around and help him. I'm not worried about starting. I'm worried about

Pistons sign Dupree

DETROIT - Ronald Dupree signed a two-year contract with the NBA champion Detroit Pistons on Wednesday.

The 6-foot-7, 209-pound for-ward averaged 6.2 points and 3.6 rebounds in 47 games with the Chicago Bulls last season. In Dupree's NBA debut, he scored a season-high 18 points on Jan. 7 at Miami. He started eight games for the Bulls, averaged 19 minutes per game, and scored in double figures 13 times

Financial terms of the deal were not immediately available.

Dupree was cut by the Pistons in October last year, before the season started. The former Louisia ana State star was added to Detroit's training camp as an undrafted rookie

He averaged 16.9 points for Huntsville of the NBDL before Chicago gave him another chance in the NBA. Dupree signed two 10-day contracts with the Bulls before they signed him Jan. 28 for the rest of the season.

DENVER — Media organiza-tions have asked the U.S. Supreme Court to intervene in their fight to publicize details from closed-door hearings in the Kobe Bryant sexual assault case

Lawyers for the media groups, which include The Associated Press, challenged a trial judge's ruling, which was upheld this week by the Colorado Supreme

Those decisions are pending. In a 4-3 ruling, the state's high court upheld Ruckriegle's order. although it acknowledged it amounts to prior restraint, which is barred by the Constitution. The court said such a step was permissible to protect the alleged victim's privacy rights and Bryant's right to a fair trial.

early struggles.

Stupples has been on the tour for four seasons but didn't win her first title until the Welch's/Fry's Championship in Tuscon, Ariz., in March.

Teen phenom Michelle Wie shot her second straight 1-under 71 and was tied for 26th.

"Today was the best and worst round of my life," said Wie, who had six birdies and five bogeys.

Wie confirmed she would not play the British Open next week. As an amateur, Wie is permitted six sponsor invitations and said she has already filled those.

Defending champion Tom Watson carded a 75.

"I don't feel 50, I feel 35," said Romero, who turned 50 five days ago. "I'm very strong. I'm still hitting it 310 yards with the drivers. It's unbelievable.

"I am very happy with my open-

Pooley's 69 included two eagles. Rhodes, who began with a par and an eagle, collected 189 bottles of wine for an ace on the 189-yard par-3 sixth hole.

"I can't remember when I had consecutive eagles in a tournament," said Pooley, who made eagle putts of 35 and 20 feet on the ninth and 10th holes. "It was a nice comeback, especially the way I started out with bogeys on three of the first four holes."

The four co-leaders are a stroke ahead of two Englishmen, Ian Mosey and Carl Mason. Mason lost in a playoff to Watson in last year's tournament at Turnberry.

Behind them are five players at 1-under, including three Americans, Bruce Fleisher, Tom Kite and John Jacobs. Fleisher is looking for his third victory of the season while Kite hasn't won for 21 months but has finished second five times.

Watson, who was close to pulling out of the $1.6 million event because of a shoulder injury, made a 6-foot putt for an eagle on No. 2.

The five-time British Open champion bogeyed three of the next five holes

"A 75 certainly doesn't put you out of the golf tournament by any means," he said. "You could get back with a 71 or a 70."

S. Williams wins first match since losing Wimbledon final

The Associated Press

CARSON, Calif. — Serena Williams defeated Eleni Daniilidou 6-1, 7-6 (3) Wednesday in the JP-Morgan Chase Open in her first match since losing the Wimbledon final.

Sports
Williams was upset 2½ weeks ago by Maria Sharapova at the All England Club, where she was seeking her third consecutive Wimbledon title.

In an effort to raise their rankings, Williams and older sister Venus are straying from their habit of not playing in the same non-Grand Slam tournament. They also are entered for next week's WTA tournament stop in Carlsbad.

Serena came into the Carson tournament — only her seventh of the year — ranked No. 16, her lowest spot since March 1999. She was No. 1 last August, when she had knee surgery. Venus is No. 13 after moving up two spots since reaching last week's final at Stanford, where she lost in three sets to Lindsay Davenport. Venus lost in the second round at Wimbledon.

Davenport, seeded third, defeated Anne Kremer 7-5, 6-2 in just over an hour at the Home Depot Center. Kremer got into the main draw when another player was injured.

Öther second-round winners Wednesday were: No. 5 Svetlana Kuznetsova, No. 6 Ai Sugiyama, No. 14 Chanda Rubin, No. 15 Amy Frazier and Jelena Kostanic, who surprised No. 9 Patty Schnyder, 6-1, 7-6 (5). Tina Pisnik of Slovakia withdrew.

Seeded players have tough day in Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS — It took a set, but Sebastien Grosjean finally did what several other seeded players could not do Wednesday in the second round of the RCA Championships — beat a lesser opponent.

After dropping a 9-6 tiebreaker to Julien Jeanpierre in the first set, the third-seeded Grosjean took control to win the next two sets 6-2, 6-2 and move into the round of 16.

Fifth-seeded Mardy Fish dropped a 7-6 (4), 7-6 (4) decision to unseeded Gregory Carraz.

Top-seeded Andy Roddick's second-round match was postponed Wednesday night because of storms.

Defending champion Roddick, who had a first-round bye, won the first set 6-4. Michel Kratochvil was leading the second set 5-2 when the match was postponed.

Little progress in labor talks

NEW YORK — The NHL held another round of labor talks with the NHL Players' Association on Wednesday at the league's offices in Manhattan. In the first formal negotiation since late May, the NHL briefs NHL continued to pursue a salary-cap system for the next collective-bargaining agreement. The union continued to reject the idea. NHL executive vice president and chief legal officer Bill Daly afterward said the league presented the union with "six different concepts for a new system that would achieve our objectives in collective bargaining." Daly said the concepts were each "fundamentally different" and that not all included a salary cap. However, union senior director Ted Saskin disputed that claim.

"They did put forth six new different system con-

The sides will meet Aug. 4 in Toronto; the current CBA expires Sept. 15. NHL training camps will not open if an agreement is not in place.

A lockout of the 2004-05 season seems likely. The NHL has been preparing for one since 1998, when it began collecting $10 million per team to set up a $300-million lockout fund to prop up financially weaker teams through a lengthy work stoppage. Earlier this week, more than half of the NHL's employees were issued termination notices effective Sept. 20 if no agreement is reached by Sept. 16. Bettman insists on a salary-cap system for the NHL, which, he said, is expecting to carry a loss of "well over $200 million" from the 2003-04 season.

Went over $200 million from the 2003-04 season. Twenty of the 30 teams are expected to claim a loss. The league wants to lower the percentage of leaguewide revenue that goes to player compensation, which is currently about 75 percent.

The union isn't against that idea, but won't agree to a fixed number that controls players' salaries. They are more amenable to a luxury-tax system, which the league will not embrace.

Pitching keeps Rangers on a roll in West

Drese a stalwart at home again in defeat of Angels; Boston pounded

The Boston Red Sox sure could use the pitching the Texas Rangers are getting.

Ryan Drese threw seven innings in another impressive home start, leading Texas to a 3-2 victo-Wednesday night over West rival Anaheim, while Boston's Pedro Martinez was hit hard. He gave up

son-high eight runs and lost for the first time since May 16 in Rolti more's 10-5 victory over Boston.

Texas leads Oakland by 31/2 games in the West and is six up on the Angels. If the Rangers can keep up their pace - currently. the best record they've had through 92 games — they could win the division for the first time since 1999.

"It's why we are in first. We have the hitters, but we have to pitch," said closer Francisco Cordero, who got his 30th save. "It's been an unbelievable season, not only for me, but the whole team.

The Rangers, who play in one of the most notorious hitters' park not located a mile above sea level, have always hit well at home. But before this season, their pitching was a weakness - and part of the reason they finished last four seasons in a row.

This season, Kenny Rogers has been the staff ace — an All-Star, he's 12-3 with a 4.34 ERA — and Drese is having the best season of his short career. He has a 3.58 ERA in 1281/3 innings — a major step forward compared to his combined 6.63 ERA over the past two seasons

Torrid Dodgers finally tumble

Estes helps Colorado end L.A.'s eight-game streak

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Despite being down by six runs, the Los Angeles Dodgers felt they could stage another incredible rally Shawn Estes could feel it, too.

Shawn Green homered with two outs in the ninth inning Wednesday night, and Los Angeles got the potential tying run to second before the Colorado Rockies held on for a 6-5 victory that snapped the Dodgers' eight-game win ning streak

Estes (10-4) won for the fourth time in five decisions and improved to 5-0 in nine starts this year against NL West teams.

Three of those wins have come against the division-leading Dodgers, who returned from a six-game road trip to Arizona and Houston and lost for only the second time in 16 games

"I knew they came in hot, so what you have to do is execute pitches and see what happens," Estes said. "I had some success against them in the first month of the season, but they're a different ballclub now.

There's a lot of energy over there and they believe they can win any game, regardless of how much they get down. I could sense that on the mound. I felt that all they needed was a little bit of a snark, and they got that in the sixth inning. It was all I could do to keep it 6-4.

The Dodgers, who came from behind to win all six games of their road trip, closed within two with a solo homer by Jose Hernandez in the fourth and three runs in the sixth.

Hernandez doubled home one, Milton Bradlev had an RBI groundout and Adrian Beltre

Colorado's Aaron Miles, left, dives over Los Angeles' David Ross to complete a double play Wednesday at Dodger Stadium. Los Angeles lost for only the second time in 16 games hit a sacrifice fly, which would have been a two-run homer if not for a leaping grab by left fielder Jeromy Rurnitz

Steve Reed relieved Estes with one out and two on in the seventh after Paul Lo Duca pinch-hit for Darren Dreifort, Lo Duca, in his second at hat as a ninch-hitter this season grounded into an inning-ending double play on the first pitch.

Reed pitched a perfect eighth, and Shawn Chacon got three outs for his 21st save in 28 chances. Chacon gave up Green's 13th homer before retiring pinch-hitter Robin Ventura with a runner on second

"The sign of a good team is that you're never out of it," Dodgers catcher David Ross said. "I know that when Hernandez hit that home run, it was like, 'Here we come.' So nobody was packing it in. We can feel it in the dugout, and they can feel it. If you give us a little time, we're going to get some runs."

One night after watching teammate Jason Jennings give up a franchise-worst 15 hits in a 9-7 loss to San Diego. Estes allowed four runs on five hits and struck out five in 61/3 innings after limiting San Francisco to one run in a season-high eight innings last Friday.

The left-hander, who won 19 games for San Francisco in 1997, pitched for three other teams during the previous two seasons and won only 13 games. He made Colorado's roster out of spring training as a non-roster invitee, and ended up starting the season opener.

"I felt like I had a lot left in me, and I feel my best is yet to come," Estes said. "I took the offseason very seriously, and I knew that I was going to be able to contribute to any ballclub that gave me a chance. I owe a lot to the Rockies organization.'

Dodgers lefty Kazuhisa Ishii (11-5) allowed six runs, seven hits and three walks over 31/3 innings in his second-shortest outing this season

Jeter is day-to-day with minor hand injury

NEW YORK - Yankees shortstop Derek Jeter has a small fracture in his right hand that kept him out Wednesday night's game, but he does not need surgery and will not wear a cast.

Jeter was hit by a pitch from Tampa Bay's Victor Zambrano on Tuesday. Asked when Jeter will return to the lineup, New York General Manager Brian Cashman said Wednesday, "It could be as early as tomorrow.

Jeter had an MRI and X-rays in New York, and the team an-nounced the test results after the victory. The Yankees' captain is day-to-day with non-displaced fracture in a bone above his wrist. "He told me, 'I could be playing right now,' " Cashman said. "It could've been worse, but it's not good, either, Jeter is hitting .278 with 14 home runs and 49 RBIs. The

All-Star has gone 31 games without making an error, the longest active streak by an AL shortstop. Slugger Jason Giambi, however isn't sure when he'll play. Bothered by an intestinal parasite earlier this season, Giambi has been slowed by fatigue. Another set of doctors is trying to determine what's wrong, and Giambi said he was checked for cancer on Wednesday — nothing was found. Giambi will be examined for infectious diseases on Thursday.

Williams does it all in Cards' 1-0 win

ST. LOUIS - Woody Williams took care of everything. Williams threw seven innings of five-hit ball in 93-degree heat.

NL

got two of the St. Louis Cardi-nals' three hits and scored in a Roundup 1-0 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers on Wednesday night.

"Hopefully this is the only time it's going to happen," Williams "They pitched good and I definitely got lucky on the second hit, and ended up scoring a run. Edgar Renteria hit a sixth-inning sacrifice fly for the Cardinals (60-34), who have the best record in the major leagues and have won 11 of 12 at home. Overall, they've won 14 of 16

Williams (7-6) outdueled Victor Santos (9-4) to move above .500 for the first time. He began the season 1-5 after being limited to five innings in spring training due to shoulder tendinitis, but is 4-0 with a 2.49 ERA in his past seven starts. "Woody stepped up," Cardinals manager Tony La Russa said. "To pitch seven innings in that heat with no margin for error - outstanding.

Jason Isringhausen, the third Cardinals pitcher, worked the ninth for his 25th save in 29 chances. He has saves each of the past three days and struck out two of the three Brewers he faced, likely earning a day off Thursday

St. Louis' Woody Williams threw seven shutout innings, got two hits and scored the game's only run against Milwaukee on Wednesday.

Williams, who has 99 career victories also had his first two-hit game of the year with a pair of singles. He reached on a bloop hit to start the sixth, went to third on a fielding error by second baseman Bill Hall and scored on Renteria's one-out fly to right.

Ben Grieve appeared poised for a throw to the plate but changed his mind and threw to second to keep Tony Womack at first. Both managers agreed it was the right call cause then we'd have gotten that extra base," La Russa said. "Tony was tagged up and ready to. That was a smart play. "How is he going to throw him out from deep right?" Brewers manager Ned Yost said. "He's got no chance, less than zero. I'd much rather have the ball towards second.

Williams, who grew up and lives in Houston, appeared to gain strength as the game unfolded. Five of his strikeouts came in the last three innings

'Early on I felt good." Williams 'But I didn't have the command I had in the end.'

Santos lost for the first time in eight road decisions this season. although he permitted only an unearned run in six innings In other NL games Wednesday:

Pirates 4, Braves 2: Kris Benson made another strong start before the trade deadline, allowing five hits in eight innings to lead visiting Pittsburgh to its 17th victory in 22 games.

Benson, in the final year of his contract and not expected to re-sign with the Pirates, is being scouted by about a half-dozen teams as the July 31 deadline approaches. After the first, Benson (8-7) didn't give up a hit until Andruw Jones' opposite-field single with one out in the eighth.

Lance Armstrong, in the velloy iersev. leads Italy's Ivan Basso in Thursday's Tour de France stage.

Armstrong stages another victory

BY JOHN LEICESTER The Associated Press

GRAND-BORNAND, France - With an amazing final burst of speed, Lance Armstrong won the 17th stage of the Tour de France on Thursday, extending his overall lead as he marches to ward a record sixth straight title.

The stage victory was Arm-strong's third in three days and fourth of this Tour, the fourth time he's won four times in a Tour. The Texan could get a fifth stage victory during a time trial on Saturday.

Armstrong, distinctive in the overall leader's yellow jersey, launched himself into top gear within sight of the line to sprint past German champion Andreas Kloden, winning by inches.

"No gifts this year, five-time champion said. "I want to win.'

find his victory hard to believe. A wide smile on his face, he jubilantly thrust his fists into the air as he zoomed past Kloden, who had seemed destined to win until Armstrong found the extra burst of speed The victory, coming at the end of one of the hardest mountain stages this year, gave Armstrong bonus seconds that extended his overall lead on Italian Ivan Basso.

German Jan Ullrich was third in the sprint, followed by Basso.

Both in the mountains and, on Thursday, in a sprint, Armstrong has been in a different class than his rivals. His lead of 4 minutes. 9 seconds over Basso should easily carry him through to the top of the podium in Paris on Sunday.

By the end of the final climb Thursday, only Basso, Kloden and Ullrich had managed to stay with Armstrong and teammate Floyd Landis, who worked tirelessly to steer his leader up the ascent.

At the summit, Armstrong reached an arm over to Landis and gave him the green light to try to win. The finish was eight miles away, at the end of a long speedy descent

"I spoke to Floyd at the summit and asked him, 'How fast are you in the descent?' He said, 'Very, very quick,' and I said, 'Go! go!' " Armstrong said.

Landis zoomed away but was quickly caught by Ullrich, which rompted Armstrong to catch up, followed by Basso and Kloden.

The five riders jostled for posi tion as they sped through the final corners leading to the finish at Le Grand-Bornand in the Alps. As the line neared, Kloden suddenly spurted ahead and the stage seemed his.

But for Armstrong, the chance for another victory in his favorite race was simply too hard to pass up. With one final glance over his shoulder, he rocketed off in pur suit and found just enough speed to edge Kloden at the line.

The Tour de France is so special," Armstrong said. "My form is suner

Armstrong dedicated his victory to Landis, who rode strongly for his leader Thursday but finished last in the sprint.

"I really wanted him to win the stage," the Texan said.

Armstrong now has 20 individual stage victories. He also has two collective wins, taking the team time trial with his U.S. Postal Service squad this year and last.

The other years when Armstrong won four stages in a single Tour were 1999, his first victory after a comeback from cancer, 2001 and 2002

Titans say goodbye to RB George

The Associated Press

After eight years and more than 10.000 yards rushing. Eddie George is without a job after being released by the Tennessee Titans as a salary cap casualty.

The team granted George's re quest Wednesday, releasing him in time to catch on with another squad for train ing camp. George, turns 31 in September, reject-ed the Titans' latest offer and asked for his release Monday. The Titans wanted George back, but at a reduced salary. The team's final offer was $1.5 million in base salary, considerably less than the $4.25 million he expected to make this season

In 2000, he ran for 1,509 yards, averaging 3.7 yards per carry. Last season, his average fell to 3.3 yards as he gained 1,031 yards. George, who started 128 consecutive games for Tennessee, last year became the 17th running back to top 10,000 yards. He also scored 64 touchdowns for the franchise that drafted him No. 1 in 1996 after he won the 1995 He-isman Trophy with Ohio State. In other NFL news:

■ Houston signed quarterback B.J. Symons, who set 23 NCAA records his senior year at Texas Tech, his only season as a starter. He threw for 52 touchdowns and 5.833 vards last year.

■ Kansas City signed its top draft choice, second-round pick Junior Siavii, to a six-year contract. Siavii, a 6-foot-5, 336-pound defensive tackle from American Samoa, had 58 tackles and 21/2 sacks last season for Oregon.

■ The Buffalo Bills signed free agent linebacker Jason Gildon to a one-year deal worth a reported $1.25 million. Gildon, due some $3 million this year with Pittsburgh, was cut by the Steelers in June for salary cap reasons.

Delgado was greeted with scattered boos each time he batted no telling whether that was related to his off-the-field opinions, or his status as an opposing star.

But there were brief chants of "USA! USA!" when he lined out in the top of the seventh. During a moment of silence before Kate Smith's rendition of "God Bless America" was played during the seventh-inning stretch, derisive shouts were made in his direc-

True to form, Delgado was nowhere to be seen. He left the dugout when the last out was made in the top of the seventh, and headed to the clubhouse, and was removed from the game with the Blue Jays trailing by seven runs.
